4-Cent Letter Stamp Likely In Rate Hike

WASHINGTON (A) - Chances for a final victory for the 4-cent letter stamp over a 5-cent rate appeared improved today by the choice of Senate conferees on poètal rate-pay legislation. Republican Senate leaders grumbled privately over the makeup of the conferees but said they had decided against any floor fight on the matter.

The Senate named only three conferees on the bill - Chairman Olin D. Johnston (D-SC) of the Senate Post Office Committee and Senators Monroney (D-Okla) and Carlson (R-Kan), Republicans said the number of conferees is usually five.

Johnston and Monroney both were strong proponents of a flat 4-cent rate for letters instead of the higher figure asked by President Eisenhower, Carlson led the successful floor fight for the administration's position. The Senate voted 49-42 for the 5-cent rate on nonlocal letters Communist and 4 cents on local mail, with the 5-cent stamp limited to three Press Scoffs years. The current rate is 3 cents. Carlson said he did not believe the setup necessarily would mean At Vanguard the defeat of the 5-cent stamp.

OUR COUNTRY

The union of hearts, the union of hands and the Flag of our Union for-

Not A Hero

MANY THINGS cross our minds as we think of Nathan Leopold, confessed co-murderer of young Bobby Franks in 1924, spending his first days of freedom after a third of a century behind bars. Because he has finally won his freedom at 53, he is no hero and is not to be romanticized. His crime, with that of his companion Richard Loeb. was just Lrutal murder. Has he paid enough for what he did? How you answer that depends partly on what you think constitutes adequate and proper punishment, partly on how you weigh the actual record and experiences of Leopold during his 331/2 years Admiral W. F. Raborn in Stateville prison at Joliet, Ill.

THOSE WHO THINK capital punishment the only fit retribution for murder could not have been satisfied at any stage with the penalty inflicted upon Leopold and Loeb. Those who see life imprisonment a more fitting perhaps even a worse - punishment might be unhappy that Leopold has not been confined until his death. There is no question that he has suffered in his long imprisonment. There is no question that life within Stateville's walls is miles short of good, rewarding living. On top of that Leopold emerges into freedom a diabetic taxed also with heart and kidney ailments. His span of free years may not be long.

AT FIRST HE WAS not a good prisoner. But most of his time he has compiled an impressive record of useful work and service. Those who believe much faster means of delivering that prison is a place not simply to punish but to rehabilitate can be easily persuaded by his performance that Leopold today is fit to rejoin society. Certainly a wide range of prison experts believe that he is, for they so testified at his various parole hearings. Acknowledging the enormity of his crime, one still can have compassion for Nathan Leopold as a human being who in one warped, twisted moment cast away the fullness of life. It does not make a hero of him to see the sadness in Leopold gazing long at Lake Michigan on his first free day, reflecting on the fading-fragment of life still left to him.

Another Black Mark

SINCE THE SOVIET satellite launchings startled us, we've heard much groaning in this country about our lag in science education. If anything, however, we're even worse in the matter of foreign language training. Half America's high schools offer no modern foreign languages at all. And only 15 per cent of all U.S. high school and college students study any language but their own. A list of 36 countries scaled according to the number of years their public schools teach foreign languages finds the United States at rock bottom-No. 36. Most of the listed nations make such study compulsory. In Russia all students in the basic 10-year schools must study six years of language. University students are directed, as an extra, to study a language native to Africa or Asia. Our poor performance smacks of smugness. At a time when more Americans than ever are fanning out over the globe, it vastly limits the value of our contacts abroad. And it blocks us off from vital knowledge we need if we are to understand this world and play a greater

'Twas A Great Day

MARCH 17 was, as usual, a gr-r-reat day for the Irish, but for one Irishman, it was the gr-r-reatest day of all. The Irishman (by descent) is J. Paul Walsh, who helped direct the launching into orbit of the Navy's hitherto frustrating Vanguard rocket, bearing the grapefruit-sized satellite. Sure his Irish eyes were smiling when he saw Vanguard I soar gracefully into Florida's sunshine and disappear in orbit-promising flight. The promise was kept and Vanguard I joined Explorer I in circling the earth through outer space. Though Walsh savored success, and perhaps fingered a shamrock in his lapel while reflecting on the luck of the Irish, his thoughts must have gone back to that grim day, Dec. 6, when the earlier Vanguard blew up on its stand with a disheartening sputter. His courage then in facing up to the fiasco was matched by his satisfaction in the St. Patrick's Day success. Fnergy, Central Intelligence and

Polaris Designed To Help Prevent War

Editor's Note: This is another in the "Statesmen's Séries" of col-umns being written by distinguished personages in government, business national affairs and the military for Thomas L. Stokes, who is seriously ill.

WASHINGTON - The Navy's Polaris, symbol of a new and powerful combination of nuclearpowered submarines and longrange ballistic missiles, is an entirely new kind of weapon. In spite of the fact that the newspapers, magazines, and television channels are full of references to "ballistic missiles." relatively few people have a clear-cut concept of the basic nature of this new weapon. Preliminary role of all ballistic missiles is to provide a major war deterrent through a new and nuclear warheads to enemy targets at great distances-specifically, with H-bombs.

THE BALLISTIC missile itself is fundamentally unlike any weapon or aircraft ever conceived, though it combines characteristics of several conventional weapons. It is basically different from aircraft of any type in that its path of flight, for the first time in military history, travels through "outer space." It uses the earth's atmosphere only to reach outer space and again to pass through just before its impact on the target. In this. the ballistic missile is entirely unique. It is the first true "space weapon. In simple terms, the ballistic missile starts out as a "guided missile," propelled by one or more rocket motors and, shortly after launching, discards all of its rockets and its guidance . . . and from then on the warhead sails through space entirely on its own, just as any projectile fired from a gun.

IN . THE Polaris system, it is planned that launching will be from beneath the surface of the sea from a nuclear-powered submarine. Thus, in the Polaris Fleet Ballistic Missile, when developed, the country will have a major war deterrent weapon of unique and awesome significance. It may be fired from any spot that a submerged submarine can reach . . . either close in shore or hundreds of miles out

It will be able to reach almost enemy targets no matter ' where located, on the coastline or deep inland. Its launching site cannot be known by an enemy in advance and thus minimize destruction of the missile by surprise counter-attack on the submarine with an anti-missile or by other missile defenses.

The flight of such a weapon is in terms of thousands of miles per hour-with only 10 or 15 minutes required for the entire distance. It is expected that no other weapon could be there soon enough to prevent a launching and to intercept the Polaris, once launched.

IT IS believed that this weapon poses a certain threat to any potential aggressor of instant, devastating, and unpreventable retaliation. It may well be that this threat could exert a deterrent to aggression that could be a significant factor in preventing the outbreak of all-out war.

Another potential advantage of this system is that it will assist "removing the bull's-eye" from this country. Ballistic missile-launching sites will always be high priority targets in an aggressor's war plan, and will attract his weapons like magnets.

In this, Polaris is not an exception, but at least the magnets will be placed at sea in the vast expanse of the ocean, away from our civil population, thus, hopefully, reducing the nuclear fallout on our country.

HOWEVER, in spite-of-all the advantages which are expected to make the Polaris a very attractive system it is not a panacea, and its main use will be in bolstering the nation's deterrent forces to prevent all-out or total war. Aircraft carriers will continue to play a vital role in the limited type of war. To use the words of Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Opera-

"Since the nation's safety can never be dependent upon a single weapon system, the fleet ballistic missile system will not protect the nation by itself. We must exploit all of the abilities we now have and maintain at least the minimal capability to meet any contingency that may threaten us. This requires carriers, AWS ships, amphibious ships, and all the other war potential of the Navy and the other military services to maintain our national security."

U. S. Still Wary On Summit Disarmament

WASHINGTON -(NEA)-Cabled dispatches from Manila, to the effect that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has agreed to discuss disarmament at a summit meeting, caused something of a sensation here. This was the first time any U.S. official had been reported as saying anything State Department spokesmen were caught unprepared for this. For no such report had been sent back by Dulles.

The matter was straightened out in the secretary's final Manila press conferences. There he listed four possible subjects for a summit conference agenda.

They were reduction of U. N. veto power, peaceful use of outer space, reunification of Germany and the status of Eastern Europe. Disarmament wasn't even mentioned in this context.

The confusion could have been caused by misunderstandings after an earlier press briefing by a Dulles aide. This followed a closed meeting of American. British and French foreign ministers attending the South East Asia conference.

IT IS generally admitted that the subject of disarmament has been moved up several steps on the priority ladder since "Peace Secretary" Harold Stassen quit.

Stassen's successor, Ambassador James J. Wadsworth, has just taken over as chief U.S. negotiator on disarmament. He will not attend Cabinet meetings, as Stassen did, and he will not initiate disarmament policies.

His job will be to carry out policies determined by White House, State, Defense, Atomic other agencies concerned with disarmament.

THE TASK force of government experts who will determine these policies has not been designated. Ambassador Wadsworth's own staff for Washington and New York has not been organized. Consequently, it will be several weeks at least before any changes in disarmament policy can be made.

This could be used to bring on

Prospects are excellent that this might be just another futile procedural move. Russia's deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov proposed in the U. N. last September that the disarmament deadlock be broken in a new conference "at the highest level."

ASSUMING that the Russians still want to throw disarmament talks into a summit conference, there is little prospect they will want to give ground and talk elsewhere. But there is a strong feeling here that the only way to reach a disarmament greement with the Russians that will stick is by long, low-level negotiation. It is pointed out that the new International Atomic Energy Agency agreement took two and a half years to negotiate. Ambassador Wadsworth was U. S. negotiator the last year and a half. So he has a certain experience and success at this business.

 Let no writer of movie scripts, however eminent, think he can write for DOS without having this same many-sided gent breathing over his shoulder.

His memos regarding "A Farewell to Arms" are offered by Life as something extraordinary. They are nothing of the sort to any of us who have been inundated with them when the creative mood is on and going great guns. They are everyday, usual type memos from DOS.;

He has a singular and muscular way with the English language and if you don't think he is able to suggest that a man quit his job without ever actually saying just that, read his memo in Life to Director John Huston.

WHEN I LEFT L'Atelier Selznick for another set of movie alfalfa, I turned the job over to two articulate, imaginative braves named Don King and Cameron Shipp. Mr. Shipp since has become a writer for the best magazines and has, as well, six books to his credit. Mr. King is in Texas making a tidy dollar.

But they will confess themselves still stunned and likely to shudder in their sleep over the torrent of memos which raced and tore their way. Now Mr. Selznick had two men to write to, not just one.

When Christmas came, and amiably warmed by the spirit of the season, they came upon the annual bewilderment: what could you give a man like David Selznick? They hit upon a brilliant idea. First they took the opening phrases from a series of his memos to them and then they had them bound in a neat booklet covered with chaste leather, and sent it to him on Christmas Day.

HE WAS enchanted and told them they were men of bright minds. The phrases ran: "Forwould not question your taste, I of when you . . ." "I am compel- problems. "Disagreeable as it may be, we "Has it never occurred to you that an appalling mistake was

THE FACT is that David Selznick can use the English language in more forceful and crushing ways without once relying on profanity, use invectives or tired whipping than anyone. He has torments all his own and no one alive (unless it be Sir Winston Churchill) has such agility in phrase-making.

He can praise in a mild, innocent sentence in such a way that you know what lies beneath; "You did well, but how very long it took you and how long will it be before you do so again?"

In the same way, it is impssible to construct for him, because he is too busy to do it himself at the time, a short paragraph concerning the least igniting of casting news items or a short letter of thanks.

You will scour your mind to concoct prose you can find utterly no wrong in and when you place it before him for signature he will say, blandly and calmly: "Fine, just fine. Forgive me, please, if I make just a small. change." Then he will seize a pen and word by word, line by line, strike out all you have done and prepare a new version in every respect.

· ALL OF THIS, I have to say, I found uninflaming. I don't think I ever felt insulted or bastinadowhipped. And if no other lasting triumph ever came my way while under the thrall and on the payroll of this film titan, I did give his wife-to-be her imperishable name, stealing it shamelessly from a nursery rhyme: Jennifer Jones. He loved it at once and she has used it ever since. The memo accompanying that ineras- against life?" able deed was fulsome and without rancor. It said: "Good."

Where Cars Can Be Too Long

WASHINGTON. - I gather that the only gent in the Domincan Republic who's allowed to ride in a long-wheelbase Cadillac is the dictator himself, General Rafael Trujillo. Anybody else who tries it gets the old heave-ho.

So there was President Eisenhower's brother-in-law, Colonel George Gordon Moore Jr., in Ciudad Trujillo in 1955, buying a load of sugar to ship home and bothering nobody. A couple of his friends, John W. Cross and George W. Gibbs Jr., were in town, building a shipyard for the dictator.

THIS JOB WAS nearly finished when Gibbs was said to have driven up in his own Cadillac, which was maybe a foot and a half longer than the generalissimo's.

"Did anybody tell you General Trujillo was very unhappy about this?" demanded Representative John Bell Williams.

Colonel Moore said he'd heard the tale of the sensitive dictator and his Cadillac, but nobody told him this specifically. All he did know was that General Manuel A. De Moya (now the Dominican ambassador here) told him to tell Gibbs to scram. Get out of the Dominican Republic and, presumably, take his Cadillac with him.

This the colonel did, he told the Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight. Colonel Moore, who didn't even have a short Cadillac, then became general manager of the shipyard. He held this job four months and was paid $8,300.

WHAT THIS interesting information about the automotive foibles of Trujillo has to do with that controversial television Channel 10 in Miami, Fla., I don't rightly know, except that the Congressmen were interest-

Representative Oren Harris suggested that the colonel had come to Washington a poor boy in 1952 and now was an almost wealthy man. WASHINGTON - Two-and-a-half hours every day for a six-day week, employes of the General Services Administration are going to school these days to learn to write letters without gobbledegook. Old homespun eventually got Channel 10 after Uncle Sam wants them to stop consummata bitter fight, but that he person ing negotiations, finalizing implementations, and promulgating the cognizance of the ameliorization.

> Twenty thousand have been graduated already, and another 20,000 are up for schooling. By the time the courses are completed, which should be before the first trip to Mars, it is hoped that people all over the country will be receiving government letters they can understand.

The need for this course is desperate the sister of the First Lady, because one billion federal letters are sent out every year. It is pretty awful to contemplate people in this country being bewildered a billion times.

Students, who up to now have been merrily confusing recipients with this gruesome ambiguity, "the enclosed booklet explains what the family should do when the worker dies to collect insurance," are being instructed to write instead, "the enclosed booklet explains what the family should do to collect insurance when the worker dies.'

THE OFFICIAL textbook insists, for some reason, that this typical piece of federalese is too involved: "an individual, or his estate in the event of death, may, by application to this commission within 90 days following the date of the damage alleged to have been sustained, or by June 30, 1957, whichever is the latter date, and by submitting such documentary evidence as may be required by the commission, establish entitlement to reparation in an amount not exceeding the amount of the fair market value of losses proved to have been sustained."

The textbook enjoins scholars against the use of many beloved gobbledegook words and phrases, which seemed to have been hallowed by time. It holds that "held in abeyance" is a pompous phrase; that "promise" is a better word than "commitment," and that "ended" is just as good as "terminated."

The scholarly tome states: "'Facilitate' is another popular government word. It means 'make easy.' but it makes hard reading for some people.'

The students are instructed to avoid 'ameliorate,'' "consummate," "effectuate" and "notwithstanding the fact that." Whereever possible, English is being substituted for jargon. By the time 40,000 are graduated, one particularly brilliant student may have been flushed who can write a decipherable foreign policy for John Foster Dulles.

CONGRESS HAS issued two new telephone directories - one for the Senate, one for the House. Under "miscellaneous," both volumes list various non-governmental establishmenis about town, but have left some peculiar omissions.

They list the AFL-CIO, but not the United States Chamber of Commerce nor the National Association of Manufacturers; the Republican Congressional Committee, but not the Democratic; the Baseball Park, but not the National Gallery of Art.

There is one omission I can scarcely credit. The directories list seven golf clubs. including the Congressional Country Club, but not Burning Tree.

Queor, of Route 1, Winthrop, N. Y., was arrested at Aberdeen, Md., Proving Ground, yesterday on a charge of transporting a stolen car - Mrs. Penny's - across state lines.

His vehicle was found abandoned near Chiefland, Ala., authorities said.

At an arraignment in Aberdeen ast night, Queor waived preliminary hearing and his case on the stolen car charge was set here for today. He was held on $20,000

Sheriff Taylor Wilkins said at Bay Minette, Ala., that a warrant would be issued charging Queor with Mrs. Penny's murder.

Wilkins said the FBI told him Queor had signed a statement admitting the slaying. He was scheduled to ship out overseas this weekend.

The sheriff reported Queor's statement said Mrs. Penny had picked him up after his car had broken down near Chiefland, Fla. Wilkins said the statement reated that Queor and Mrs. Penny began drinking and got into an argument. He said Queor admitted running over her with the car at the spot where the body was found, and hitting her with a tire

Mrs. Penny was estranged from her husband and had been visiting a sister at Largo, Fla. The sister, Mrs. Charles E. Borland, said Mrs. Penny left March 7 say ing she planned to drive to Texas.

Electrical Wiring Discussed At Meet

Area electrical contractors. builders and representatives of banks and lending institutions mel last night at the Ali Ghan Country Club for the 13th meeting sponsored by the Potomac Edison Company.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss mutual problems concerning electrical wiring in building, and the financial aid available to home owners for home wiring purposes; to review the results of the certified wiring program of last year, and to map plans for this year.

Celanese Raises Price Of Acetate

NEW YORK - Acetate staple liber and tow have been increased I and 2 cents a pound by Celanese Corporation of America, effective immediately.

Regular staple of 3, 5.5 and 8 deniers per lament were increased 2 cents to 36 cents a pound; regular staple of 2, 12 and 17 deniers per filament was' increased 1 cent to 36 cents a pound; regular tow of 3, 5.5 and 8 denier per filament 1 cent to 37 cents a pound and non-textile acetate fiber, 1 cent to 28 cents a pound.

The new prices apply to both bright and dull staple and tow. However, it was stated the increases did not apply to prices of Celacioud (type F) and Celafil type K), the Celanese specialty fibers developed for various batting and stuffing applications, which remain at existing levels.

Takeout Cues For Finesses

By O6WALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service West's double was for the birds. He did have a singleton spade but his hand was far too weak to ask partner to bid.

Fortunately for West his part ner held enough stuff to guard against a bad set, but West was punished another way for his bad

West opened the king of hearts and shifted to a small heart when East signaled with the seven. East won with the ace and led his last heart. South trumped, entered dummy with the ace of clubs and led the jack of trumps. East's king fell to South's ace.

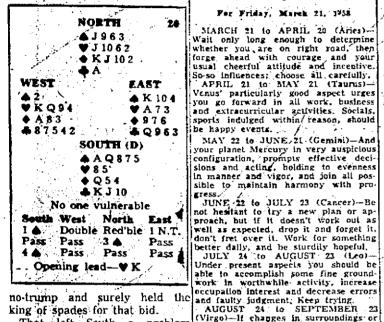

Now South ruffed a club to get back to dummy, led the nine of spades and let it ride. This took care of East's ten of trumps and South made game and rubber. How did South know enough to play the spades the way he did? He had not seen the other hands but he might just as well have.

Horoscope

For Friday, March 21, 1958

South had listened to the bidding. West had stuck in a takeout double without anything much, in the way of high cards birthday comes, and find what your to back it up. East had bid a outlook is, according to the stars, no-trump and surely held th king of spades for that bid.

That left South a problem about the ten spot but it also was no real problem. It was very unlikely that West would have made a weak takeout double unless he was very short in spades. Hence, West held a singleton spade only.
